

amazingly flattering: the inset-waist dress

This style is everywhere for fall, and it's great news: The combination of an extra-thick waistband and a neckline that's on the barer side makes just about anyone appear smaller around the middle.

brilliant invention! ring resizing liquid

This stuff is just the thing for rings that are too big—or ones that you want the option of wearing on any finger. Squeeze a small amount of this clear gel onto the inside of the ring you want to adjust (you can make it up to three sizes smaller) and let it dry. It's designed to last for a few months and easily peels off.

why a satin shirt + satin pants work

Going head to toe in this gleamy material can actually look really sleek (as opposed to really disco): Keep the palette neutral and make sure one piece—like these pants—has just slightly less sheen than the other.
